COMMISSION WON'T HELP A. A. SCHEME

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 18.—The National Baseball Commission today issued formal reasons and explanations for its decision to refuse the commission's answer to the resolutions presented by the American Association at that time.

Regarding the request that a club be allowed in Chicago it is explained that the commission has no jurisdiction in the matter until the National and American leagues have passed on it, but that the commission is opposed without qualification to a territorial infringement of this kind, and will strongly recommend that the petition be denied.

The proposition to draft players only from the clubs in the next lower league is disapproved.

"Where application for reinstatement has been refused by the commission," it is stated that action was only taken because the facts in each case warranted such refusal, and this applies particularly to those players whom the American Association has asked the commission to reinstate, namely, Brisling, Owens, Wiggs, and others.

BELVEDERES BEAT SECOND REGIMENT

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 18.—The Second Regiment basketball team of Washington, D. C., lost at Cross Street Market hall to the Belvederes, 26 to 21. In the first half the Belvederes outplayed the Washington boys at every stage, and scored 21 points to the 6 by Washington. In the second half the soldiers rallied and played the best team. Schlosser, of Washington, and Shurholtz, of the locals, did the best work. The attendance was large.

Nationals' Manager Makes Modest Prediction

C. Smith and Johnson Only Sure Pitchers On Cantillon's List

By THOMAS S. RICE.

Manager Joe Cantillon, of the Washington team, broke a world's record for modesty yesterday afternoon in his letter in The Times, when he limited his midwinter ante-season prognostication to a sincere hope that his team would beat out three of the seven other contenders in the American League race. If Cantillon had never done anything else worthy of note, by this one bit of penmanship he made himself immortal in the annals of the national game, and in the years to come grimy urchins on back lots playing one-two-three will mention with awed whispers the name of the man who, with unlimited space offered in a newspaper, confined himself to predicting that his charges would lead the second division—maybe. Washington has never been able to win pennants, but it has always been able to attract an amount of attention disproportionate to its league standing, and Cantillon will send that tradition thundering through the ages.

One First-Class Pitcher.
The confidence of the manager in his pitching department is truly touching and it would be a pity to see him disappointed, but, really it is hard to see where he is justified as hard as it is to see where he could get better pitchers if he tried, for no manager is likely to get a star twirler escape these days.

Washington has in sight one first-class pitcher—Walter Johnson. Charles Smith had an unending series of misfortunes last year that put him out of the running. When he got busy, which was not until late, he slipped off the top of a finger of his throwing hand on a piece of glass on the diamond. This set him away back and then followed sickness and trouble with his arm, which had a most disastrous effect on his work. He is credited with having taken part in thirty-two games, of which he won eleven and lost twenty-one, for a percentage of victories of .344. Incidentally, he pitched in more games than any other Washington slacker.

An Important Principle.
It may be laid down as a general proposition that when a pitcher's percentage of games won is higher than his club's percentage of victories, the twirler has done well. This is a principle very generally overlooked by those who consider pitcher's performances as shown by the figures, and, according to this principle, the showing by Case Patten in 1929 was the best in the major leagues.

Smith last year had a safe margin over the club by 19 points, despite his hard luck and many performances. He is a large, powerful man, now ripe in major league experience, has good habits, and is ambitious. Therefore he looks likely to live up to Cantillon's prediction.

Case Patten is the great mystery of the Washington pitching staff. His figures last year were by far the best on the Washington staff. He is credited with twelve victories and seventeen defeats, for an average of .414, a margin of eighty-nine points over the club. But Patten's success was limited to the early stages of the season. He got a flying start and lived on it until October 15. Toward the end of the season, in fact, from about August 1, he was decidedly the weakest veteran twirler on the Washington payroll, with the possible exception of Falkenberg, and his efforts were little less than pitiful. He went weeks without a winning, and had been traded there would have been no protest from the local fans. The tentative proposition to send him to the New York Americans in a deal for Kid Elberfeld was received by the Capital public with enthusiasm rather than protest, while if there had been suggested a trade of any kind for him last evening.

Howard Foley's men deserve all sorts of credit for their showing, although they lost. In only two cases, where Bailey threw Priell and Buby got the decision over Connolly, after being on the aggressive throughout fifteen minutes, were the weights equal. Everett Passeno again proved his worth by giving away ten pounds to Holliday, of Gallaudet, and so far outpointing him in the first bout as to earn a draw at the end of fifteen minutes.

Howard Foley conceded twelve pounds to Baxter Mosey, of Gallaudet, and gave him a hot and heavy go for five minutes and forty-five seconds.

Next to this bout the one between Bailey, of Gallaudet, and Priell was the most interesting. Bailey had the advantage, and so far outpointing him in the first bout as to earn a draw at the end of fifteen minutes.

Gardner Throws O'Brien.
Gardner, of Gallaudet, with five pounds on O'Brien, of M. A. C., started out by getting into a hole that gave his supporters palpitation of the heart, but wormed out and threw his man in two minutes and fifty seconds.

The Summaries:
Connolly, 132, M. A. C., vs. Buby, G. C., 3:00. Buby won on points after 15 minutes.
Passeno, 120½, M. A. C., vs. Holliday, 120½, G. C. Draw after 15 minutes.

Chevy Chase Golfer Talks of Plans for Women's Tournament

"The Chevy Chase Club will be delighted at landing the National Women's Golf Tournament, and just as much surprised," said Morven Thompson, a member of the Chevy Chase greens committee, yesterday, when he was told by a Times reporter that his club had been awarded the premier American event for women golfers for 1936.

"This is the first time I had heard of the award," he said. "While our delegate, Alexander Britton, had been instructed to invite the association to Washington next October, there were several other strong candidates in the field for the honor, and Washington, being in a new district, had comparatively small chance of getting in the limelight for a few years yet."

Britton Still Out of Town.
"Mr. Britton, I understand, will not be back in Washington until Monday morning, and I don't suppose we will know how he did it until his arrival. While no arrangements have yet been made looking to the entertainment of the visitors, the club bungalow affords ample facilities for their reception, although I am not officially authorized to say that they will be accommodated in that way."

"I apprehend that Mr. Britton, who is chairman of the greens committee, will call a meeting in the near future to talk the matter over, although it is yet too early to begin active work in that direction since the tournament will not be held until next October. The greens committee is composed of Mr. Britton, W. R. Tuckerman, and myself. Mr. Tuckerman, by the way, now holds the championship of the Middle Atlantic Golf Association. He captured the title at the last tournament of the Middle Atlantic body, held in Baltimore last April."

Middle Atlantic Tourney.
"It has not yet been decided, but there is a chance that the tournament of that association, which includes all clubs in the District, Maryland, and Delaware, may fall to our club this spring. If so, it will take the place of the annual tournament open to local players. Naturally, our first aim will be to take some action in the matter of the spring events before we even think about the national competition. It is also possible that the Middle States tourney may come to the Chevy Chase club. If so, we will probably abandon our local tournament altogether to leave room for the more important events. This is the merest supposition on my part, as I do not know whether the event will fall to this city at all."

"Our greens and our clubhouse are equipped in every particular to accommodate the visitors. The bungalow I mentioned will accommodate thirty and could be brought into use as a last resort."

Women Favored Philadelphia.
"I was told before the meeting of the association," continued Mr. Thompson, in speculating on why the event fell to Washington, "that the women were, as usual, greatly in favor of Philadelphia or New York, because many of the contenders live in those cities and because they are more familiar with those links. The Philadelphia Country Club was touted as the strongest candidate and two Pittsburgh clubs were expected to make high bids for the award. The club will probably hold a meeting to celebrate at an early date. It is the best piece of luck that has fallen our way for some time and we will make the most of it."

"The number of players who will come here is another point on which I am rather hazy. Two who should be

Georgetown Winner in Fast Game

Fordham Can't Cope With Machine-Like Team Work of Opponents.

Georgetown defeated Fordham in its second big basketball game last night by 25 to 14. Convention Hall was packed to the doors.

The contingent of Georgetown rooters last night indicates that the men realize that they have one of the best quints in the country and are eager to support it in a sportsmanlike manner.

The teamwork of Georgetown surpassed that of the New York aggregation and it is to this that the locals can attribute their victory. Crogan and J. Colliflower worked together like a machine, their accurate and quick passing completely mystifying the Fordham guards. Fred Rice at the center position was one of the bright stars of the game. He was all over the inclosure, receiving passes and making throws that brought the crowd to its feet time and time again. Captain Downey and G. Colliflower at the guard positions played their usual stellar game, blocking the Fordham endeavors with unusual agility. One thing noted was the rapid-fire passing of the Georgetown men. The oval shot from one player to another with wonderful momentum.

Visitors' Ineffective.
Fordham made many attempts to get its team work in action, but the guarding by the Blue and Gray quint proved to be too much for the visitors. Mahoney and Fitzpatrick made some good passes, the former being the bright light of the evening when it came to making long tries for goals.

Crogan made the first score for Georgetown after a pretty pass from J. Colliflower. Rough work on the part of the New Yorkers enabled Crogan to add two more points to the total before the end of the half. The play in this period was close all through and ended with Georgetown in the lead, 11 to 5.

The second half was a thriller. Eight minutes of the most exciting play was indulged in before Crogan made the first field goal for Georgetown. The team work of Georgetown picked up greatly during this period, and it was not long before three more goals had been tossed. Fred Rice being the bright particular star in this play.

The Line-up:
The line-up and score follow:

J. Colliflower.....R. F.....Mahoney

Referee—Mr. Plumper, of the City Basketball League. Timers—Charles Meyland for Georgetown, and Manager Taylor for Fordham. Goals from the field—Crogan, 3; J. Colliflower, 3; G. Colliflower, 3; Fred Rice, 1; Fitzpatrick, 1; Mahoney, 2; Siskind, 3. Goals from fouls—Crogan, 5; Fitzpatrick, 2. Time of halves—20 minutes each.

CURIOUS CANS.
In many parts of Europe, water and even milk and spirituous liquors are contained in curious receptacles made of animal skins—mostly pigs and goats. These skins are, of course, thoroughly cleaned and cured, but they are allowed to retain their natural shape, with the exception that the head is cut off and the neck is tied together with a stout cord. The reader can imagine how the front of an American sample room would look, if it were decorated with these curious cans, all filled with the various liquors that were on sale inside. The place would resemble a butcher's shop more than a saloon.—Exchange.
